Multi-modal integration: The key to transforming India's transport systems

In India, urbanisation is increasing rapidly, offering economic opportunities across various sectors. This leads to domestic immigration of the working-class population to these urban centres, boosting its productivity, further leading to more economic activity through the establishment of new business centres and markets. This development cycle, through an analysis of its contribution to the Gross Domestic Product (GDP), shows that urban centres are the engines of economic growth, and their contributions to GDP will continue to grow. However, the needs of a rising population in an urban landscape must be met. Rapid urbanisation means more pressure on infrastructure, increasing congestion, rising pollution and unmanageable urban sprawl. In the last few decades, governments have tried to meet the increasing travel demand. But the pace of rising demand has consistently beaten the rate of infrastructure development. Ever-rising transport demand which corresponds with economic growth has been difficult to meet in the absence of integrated planning of land use and transport.

Supporting infrastructure to keep pace with rising economic activity, therefore, is essential. Along with urban development programmes such as the smart cities mission, AMRUT and housing for all, among others, the focus on mobility infrastructure is equally important to ensure that the economic potential does not get constrained. Policy planners have been advocating public transport solutions to free up Indian cities from traffic congestion and high pollution levels. These high-investment and high-operational-expenditure projects have been approved because of the long-term, socioeconomic benefits they bring with them.

India has emerged as one of the fastest-growing markets for urban rail systems. The government has invested intensively in urban transport systems such as metro across tier-1 and 2 cities, inter and intra-city high frequency bus services, monorails and so on. However, despite these projects being successfully implemented, ridership numbers have been far below the projections of the policymakers. These numbers have further been hit by the Covid-19 pandemic.

Ahmedabad. Porn addiction is rampant today. Don't we think that parents should have more quality conversation with their children instead of keeping it bottled up. If they open up, then children feel easy to communicate with them without a fear of being judged. More and more disturbed parents and spouses have been seeking help, and there is even a growing concern in schools. It hurts child's spirit and infects mind with unclean thoughts.

Pornography consumption is not something that can easily be stopped. One of the appetites that it has developed, it actually increases. Recently the Central Bureau of Investigation has smashed an international child pornography racket, being run for the past two years through a WhatsApp group that had 11.9 members from 18 countries. Porn or no porn should be decided by the common man and not by a bunch of bureaucrats. Pornography has existed for centuries and there has been a debate about whether pornography is socially or morally acceptable but as it involves adults, there is no law that is broken. But when children are involved in sexual exploitation, pornography is openly regarded to be a heinous crime in multiple nations. Adolescence goes downhill when there are too many restrictions. When obscenity becomes a commodity, it threatens to corrode the very bedrock of ethics on which a healthy society is founded. In such cases, sex education should be made compulsory for students before they reach puberty so that they understand sex and its functionality. Many schools focus exclusively on academics, paying little attention to effective counseling of adolescents. There has to be a policy to reduce the focus in the area of sex in general if our women and children are to be protected globally. At an individual level, pornography addiction, including cyber porn addiction, is one of the most notorious problems associated with pornography use today. Child pornography is a real and pressing problem that exists on local, national, and international levels. Child Protection Act, 2012 provides protection to children from sexual assault, harassment and pornography. In this Act, Section 13 makes use of children for pornographic purposes a criminal offence that can lead to being jailed for up to five years. The world of internet and social media appeals the child a lot and because of this young mind does not give a second thought on the dark side of that world. With the internet making its way to phones, people now don't even care about who is sitting next to them. The government has already told the Supreme Court that there cannot be a complete ban on internet pornography in the country and legal actions are not possible in a large number of cases. The only way out is for parents to spend their free time interacting with their children instead of watching boring television soaps. The influence of cinema and television on our impressionable youth cannot be underestimated. There are many of them who have explicit scenes bordering on soft porn. At times, there are even advertisements for safe sex or use of condoms being television soaps. The children who are depicted young girls and boys. We all know of a scientifically proven bad effects of porn films. They tear families apart, objectify women and pollute children's mind. Today the children addicted to pornography are in various stages in their values, attitudes, development and also give rise to unwanted health issues. There are children who are not taking away from their parents saying that need to download some study material from Internet to complete their homework, but instead spend their watching porn clippings at the cafes. It is a part of socialization seems to be a difficult proposition to accept as it is a by-product of child sexual abuse. It has become very important that people talk about child pornography so as to raise awareness of the implications of such crimes in our society. Peer pressure is also a cause of child pornography. It is high time that child pornography is dealt with separately. Children being weak, gentle and meek should be protected from the world of criminals, shady people, and negative people and so on. These vulnerable kids fall prey to the predators of child abuse, child trafficking, child pornography etc. Sex Education today is both timely and apt as the importance of sex education is becoming a v o r e m p h a s i z e d. Unfortunately, we do not take sex education seriously because there exists a huge communication gap between the political leadership and the scientific community. Schools are ideal places where students can get answers to basic questions on sex. With teenage pregnancies and abortions on the rise, and an increase in the number of cases affected by AIDS, sex education for children is a must. Because of the conservative culture that exists in our society, children find it difficult to discuss sex with their parents or teachers. Due to lack of information and the cultural barrier, many of them become easy prey to pedophiles. It is necessary to prevent children from learning from bad peers and obscene books. Other schools in the city should make sex education part of the curriculum to avoid such misinformation and restrict child abuse. There must be check on their activities by the parents while using net. They must also be made aware of the pros and cons of the high tech modern world and social media. It is important to develop an understanding of the problem so that laws are made and implemented to curb child pornography and children are given to children are actually practiced. The Indian cyber law needs to be amended and made more effective to curb access, use, transmission and publishing of porn. Also, cyber education and etiquette need to be inculcated in school curriculum to sensitize children about the huge porn content available and how they should protect themselves from it. People should be educated to note the behavioural changes of the children and find out the reasons for abuses to save the child from trauma. Such measures should be prolonged. Sex education as a part of curriculum will create awareness and a healthier India. (B-45, Pooj-Kalash Society, Jodhpur Tekra, Satellite, Ahmedabad - 380 015)

one year but made it clear that Patel would not seek any adjournment on account of his absence. He would also not raise any plea or dispute about identification of witnesses, if the trial goes ahead in his absence during the year.

AHMEDABAD: In a relief for the Congress, a bench of judges, led by Chief Justice, Hardik Patel, granted him permission to move out of Gujarat without prior permission from the court for one year. The restrictions on Patel's movement were imposed in January 2020 by the court, which had in 2015 session case against the former convener of the Patidar Anant Samiti (PAAS), while granting him bail, he was then arrested for skipping court hearings on multiple occasions.

Patel's advocate Rafik Lokhandwala filed an application in the court and sought permanent deletion of the bail condition or a relaxation for two years so that Patel does not have to seek court's permission every time he needs to leave Gujarat. It was contended that Patel is a social activist and political leader and has to go outside Gujarat frequently for social activities.

It was also submitted that Patel is acting president of Gujarat Congress and he is under obligation to visit various places in India to attend social and political functions. Patel's request was vehemently opposed by the cyber cell of the city crime branch and it was argued that if allowed to move outside Gujarat, Patel may not be available during court hearings.

After hearing the case, additional sessions judge B J Ganatra suspended the restrictions on movement for
